Bio

I am a scholar of critical health communication with research interests in global health, community-partnered research, and pandemic governance. I possess leadership experience in institutionalizing a culture of community-partnered research at institutions of higher learning, managing interdisciplinary research teams, securing program funding, managing diverse stakeholders, and engaging students through a global-critical pedagogical philosophy. I am the 1st Vice-President of the National Communication Association.

Achievements:

1. Established deep professional connections between the center and established local community partners in sustainability and environment (Green Umbrella and Groundwork Ohio River Valley)
2. Awarded $20,000 in “Grassroots Innovation Grants” to local academic-community collaborations to facilitate a pipeline of community-partnered research around extreme weather in the region.
3. Helped conceptualize the internal communications strategy and refine the visual identity of the center.

2021-2025

Director, The Cincinnati Project (TCP), University of Cincinnati

2019-2021

Co-Director

2014-2021

Leadership Team Member

The Cincinnati Project connects researchers in the College of Arts and Sciences with organizations that serve marginalized people to conduct research with a direct community benefit. Faculty research projects and classroom projects have evaluated programs, administered surveys, created maps, made policy recommendations, developed programming, recommended communication strategies, and produced academic papers. The results have helped agencies improve their services and led to policy changes, such as the city of Cincinnati funding an eviction-prevention program. The Cincinnati Project also responded to community requests by coordinating interdisciplinary research, public exhibitions, service agreements, and needs assessments.

Achievements:

1. Managed successful transition of leadership and continuity of programming and operations as Chair. Secured program funding through several federal extramural grants, private awards, and donor gifts.
2. Ensured successful future and codified direction of The Cincinnati Project by collaborating to develop strategic plan for 2019-2024.
3. Provided meaningful and visible opportunities for leadership among diverse faculty and students.
4. Promoted TCP and solicited participation among faculty and students, leading to over 700 faculty and students participating in 6 years.
5. Advanced TCP by networking with area non-profits and city leaders, overseeing development of website and promotional materials, and managing social media presence and traditional media engagements.
6. Engaged campus and Cincinnati area with an annual symposium featuring academic and non-academic presentations on topics such as how to equitably engage in research partnerships across multiple levels of difference, the benefits of universities and community groups partnering, issues confronting our city, and examples of collaborative projects.
7. Collaborated on successful internal and external grant proposals and foundation proposals needed for operation of TCP.
8. Represented TCP and UC at multiple local, regional and national-level events around community-partnered research.

2023-2024

Chair, Research Council, National Communication Association

2022-2023

Incoming Chair

2019-2021

Council Member

NCA Research Council is responsible for supporting the creation and dissemination of knowledge about communication. The council works jointly with the director of academic & professional affairs. Research Council administers research grants, scholarly awards and the promotion of Communication research for the discipline's national professional organization.

Achievements:

1. Ideated and co-wrote the proposal for NCA Research Cultivation Grant (RCG), which has led to the development of a research support system for Communication scholars whose areas of work are not typically supported by extramural funding. Since 2019, this mechanism has funded >$180,000 in supporting cutting-edge, international-facing, innovative Communication scholarship.
2. Collaborated with council members to organize the 2019 and 2021 Mid-Career Scholars Writing Retreats
3. Collaborated to identify three Communication scholars as Woolbert Award winners. The Charles H. Woolbert Award is NCA's most distinguished award for research.
4. As Chair, managed council budgets, coordinated with NCA regional office and with council membership.

2023-present

Member, Executive Committee, NCA Legislative Assembly

The Executive Committee of NCA's Legislative Assembly administers the policies of the Assembly and, between annual meetings of the LA, serves as the chief administrative authority of NCA.

2020-2024

Senior Editor, Health Communication

Senior Editor (one of five) of the flagship journal in the field of health communication

2020-2021

Chair, NCA Asian & Pacific-American Caucus and Communication Studies Division (APAC/SD)

2019-2020

Vice-Chair and Program Planner

2018-19

Second Vice-Chair

The Asian/Pacific American Caucus comprises scholars who research and study the Asian/Pacific American culture. Members of this caucus work with the association to ensure that the interests of Asian/Pacific American members are taken into account for any policies or procedures. They also work to shed light on research pertaining to Asian/Pacific American cultures and integrate that research with other units and divisions. They sponsor meetings and sessions at the annual convention and work with other NCA caucuses to create opportunities for scholars and strengthen the association as a whole

Achievements:

1. As Chair, managed the caucus and divisional budgets, represented the caucus and division at governance meetings, and advocated for AAPI concerns in and outside NCA.
2. As Chair, organized and oversaw convention programming and ran a Mentorship and Networking session at the national convention.
3. As Vice-Chair, planned the convention program for the division and caucus, which included generating a call for papers and panels, soliciting reviews for > 75 submissions, successfully organizing reviews, sharing reviews with submitters, building convention sessions, assigning Chairs and respondents, and coordinating with other divisional planners
4. As second-Vice Chair, introduced language and criteria for new awards for the division, solicited nominations for awards, organized award committees and selected award winners.

Visiting Scholar, Communication University of China

National Communication Association - Communication University of China Visiting Scholar Program, Spring 2020 (to be rescheduled on account of COVID-19)

Pedagogy and Advising

Courses Taught at the University of Cincinnati

COMM 8069	Seminar in Health Communication: Meaning, Culture, Power
Graduate	This graduate seminar addresses the ways that language and culture constitute
2012-2025	the meanings of health and illness and the influence of those constructions on
In-person	our personal, embodied experiences of health and healing as well as institutional and policy outcomes. Students analyze the role of communication in constructing beliefs about health and illness and compare biomedical models of disease with sociocultural and critical approaches to health promotion.
COMM 7007	Advanced Communication Theory
Graduate	One of three required core courses for the MA program in Communication at
2015-2025	University of Cincinnati. Students learn the broad frameworks around the
In-person and online	philosophy of Communication theory and the various traditions in Communication research.
COMM 7042	Qualitative and Rhetorical Research Methods
Graduate	This course offers an introduction to qualitative and rhetorical research methods
2020-2025	in the social sciences, beginning with a historical examination of interpretivism as
In-person	a philosophical endeavor. Through readings in cognate fields of ethnography, cultural studies, communication, textual analysis and discourse analysis, the course will take a hands-on approach to the process of discovery, data collection, analysis, reflexivity, and reporting in qualitative research studies.
COMM 5000	Communication and Health Disparities
Undergrad	Course developed as a senior capstone offering for Communication seniors and
Capstone	allied majors. Students in this seminar read recent research on either one of two
2017	research topics: urban communication, or urban health disparities.
In-person
COMM 4050	Communication, Culture and Globalization
Undergrad	This is a course I have developed for juniors and seniors in our program. I see this
2017-2025	course as central to my personal pedagogical mission of globalizing the
In-person and online	Communication curriculum and is the only globally-focused course offered in our program at the undergraduate level. Students read and critique various dimensions of globalization, including, but not limited to cultural, political, economic, migration aspects of globalization, and reflect upon the role of communication and in circulating discourses of immigration, offshoring, cultural appropriation and exchange.
COMM 2004	Communicating Health, Science and the Environment
Undergrad	Introductory course for the COMMSHER (Communicating health, science, environment and risk) undergraduate certificate. Developed as an introductory
2012-2025	course to issues in health, science and environmental communication for
In person

Online (full semester) communication and a number of non-Communication majors. Students are introduced to a survey of the fields of health, science and environmental communication and participate in discussion-based and application-based assignments to understand the everyday nature of COMMSHER. "adult learner" tailored course
