594MD	Special Topic – Media Representation of Diversity The course explores social scientific theory and research on intergroup dynamics and how media representations of diversity affects these relations. In the beginning of the semester, we will focus on a) social psychological explanations of intergroup dynamics and biases, and b) theories explaining how media affects outgroup perceptions and attitudes. Next, we will explore media effects literature on how racial majority and minority groups are presented in the media and the consequences of these portrayals on intergroup relations. Finally, we will focus on how the media can be used to promote positive intergroup relations.	Saleem	S
